

Warm, Rich Colours

This centrepiece features natural birch bark, wood pieces, evergreens and pine cones. For floral we chose rich red roses, lisianthus and long-lasting orchids. This piece also features silk berries that will last long after the blooms fade; it would fit seamlessly into almost any Christmas decor.

White and Stylish

This Norman Pot bowl's blackish metal with grey and gold touches, and contrasting brass-coloured seams, inspired us to design with grey-ish coloured greenery, including various varieties of eucalyptus and Carolina Sapphire. White freesia, white 'playa blanca' roses, blue berries, washed pine cones, gold-dusted oak leaves and pheasant feathers create a stylish holiday look.

Tropical Beauty

After 20 years of working with tropical flowers, I'm still inspired by their very 'presence' – the unusual beauty. Adding tropical foliage to the mix of traditional Christmas greenery guarantees a second look. This centrepiece celebrates joy and diversity. It has an elegant offset of Barbadian gingers in a luscious Christmas hue. And the King Protea is a simple showstopper.

Earth to Table

A compilation of greens, branches, cones, etc., from my own English-cottage-style garden. Unusual vessels give any bouquet personality. I love using vintage ones, ranging from blue and white porcelain to milk glass, which can make even the simplest florals look spectacular.
